FOR PROFESSIONAL SERVICE TO SUPPLY PANELS INTRODUCING VIETNAM FARMERS' UNION HOTLINE 18001768 SUPPORTING WOMEN AND GIRLS SUBJECTED TO VIOLENCE

1. BACKGROUND

Typhoon Yagi, the strongest storm to hit Viet Nam in 30 years, struck the northern region on 7 September 2024, bringing devastating floods and landslides. The storm displaced over 130,000 people, damaged more than 240,000 homes, and severely disrupted essential services, including health, social support, and protection mechanisms. Among the most affected provinces, Lao Cai and Cao Bang experienced large-scale flooding, landslides, and destruction of critical infrastructure, significantly heightening vulnerabilities for women and girls.

In emergency situations, the risk of gender-based violence (GBV) escalates due to displacement, economic stress, and breakdown of protection systems. Overcrowded and under-resourced evacuation centers pose additional risks, particularly for women and children, who are more vulnerable to violence, exploitation, and abuse. The disruption of communication systems and support services has made it more difficult for GBV survivors to seek help or access critical assistance, leaving many at heightened risk of harm.

Before the disaster, Viet Nam already faced significant GBV challenges. According to the 2019 National Study on Violence Against Women, 62.9% of ever-married women aged 15-64 reported experiencing some form of violence by an intimate partner, yet 90.4% never sought help from formal service providers². The lack of accessible GBV services was one of the primary barriers preventing survivors from reporting abuse or seeking support. The impact of Typhoon Yagi has exacerbated this issue, worsened isolation and limited access to available resources, especially for women in remote, rural, and disaster-affected areas.

To address this urgent need, UNFPA, with funding from the Australian Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade (DFAT), is collaborating with the Vietnam Farmers' Union (VFU) to expand the visibility and reach of the GBV hotline 1800 1768 in Lao Cai and Cao Bang. This toll-free 24/7 hotline, established in December 2021 under a UNFPA-supported project, provides confidential, survivor-centered counseling and referral services. Despite its proven effectiveness—having handled over 17,600 calls and assisted 2,750 GBV survivors as of January 2025—many women and girls in affected areas remain unaware of this life-saving service.

To bridge this information gap, UNFPA and VFU will distribute 2,250 communications panels across Lao Cai and Cao Bang to ensure wider awareness and accessibility of the hotline. By increasing visibility in high-risk communities, this initiative aims to enhance survivors' access to timely and appropriate GBV response services, ensuring that no woman or girl facing violence is left without support—even in the aftermath of disaster.

2. PURPOSE/OBJECTIVES

The main objective of the professional service is to disseminate information on the hotline number 1800 1768 providing free counselling service for GBV survivors in Lao Cai and Cao Bang provinces.
